

JAMES CONNOLLY

NOAKES

“The working class of the world, by their keenness of mind and strength of body, have made everything in the world their own—its land, its factories, its ships, its railroad, its houses, everything on earth and sea has been consecrated by the labor of the working class, and therefore belongs to that class; and as factories, ships, its railroads, and buildings cannot be divided up in pieces, they must be owned in common”
